Report regarding Lost Earnings – Abdullah Haydar

Dear Mr. Nacht:

The purpose of this correspondence is to provide you with a report which explains my opinions, and the basis and reasons behind them. To begin, I have obtained the following information and documents:

1. Background information for the Abdullah Haydar – date of birth, date of hire, date of termination, race, education, occupation, area of residence, etc.
2. A copy of Plaintiff's Complaint and Jury Demand, and Stipulated Protective Order.
(Please treat this report as confidential, and entirely subject to the protective order.)
3. Earnings information of comparable employees in L7 and L8 at Amazon, for years 2014 – 2018, as contained within documents numbered 00008411 and 00008898. For the purposes of this report, I have been asked to consider Mr. Cohen and Mr. Garibay as comparable L7 employees, and Mr. Gaw and Mr. Mosby as comparable L8 employees.

4. Plaintiff's W2 statements, for 2012 – 2017.
5. Plaintiff's tax returns, for 2012 – 2015.
6. Plaintiff's resume (dated sometime after July, 2016).
7. A copy of plaintiff's hire letter from Amazon (with start date of November 19, 2012), dated October 11, 2012.
8. Information regarding Amazon RSU/stock program (including vesting schedule of RSU's granted to plaintiff at time of hire), and Vision and Health plans.
9. A copy of plaintiff's employment file from FarmLogs/AgriSight, Inc.
10. A copy of plaintiff's employment file from HookLogic/Criteo.
11. A copy of plaintiff's hire letter from Linked (with start date of August 13, 2018), dated July 30, 2018
12. Deposition transcript of Jennifer Johahnson, dated November 8, 2017.
13. Life Expectancy information from: "United States Life Tables, 2014," U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, National Vital Statistics Reports, Volume 66, Number 4, August 14, 2017, tables 2 and 14; and from the: "Social Security Life Expectancy Calculator;" <http://www.socialsecurity.gov/OACT/population/longevity.html>.

There are 4 Attachments at the end of this report:

- A. Lost Earnings Charts.
- B. Inflation Charts.
- C. Curriculum Vitae.
- D. Case List.

The first attachment contains six charts. The first three charts contain graphs which illustrate the annual differences in Mr. Haydar's earnings at Amazon and his earnings since he was terminated at Amazon. There are 3 alternative graphs: i) using two other L7 employees (Cohen & Garibay) as earnings comparables, ii) using L8 employee "G" (Gaw) as an earnings comparable, and iii) using L8 employee "M" (Mosby) as an earnings comparable. The fourth through sixth charts in Attachment A contain the quantitative details of my opinions, and they utilize the same three alternatives/comparables (as explained above). The major assumptions are provided in the footnotes at the bottom of each of the last three charts. Please note that all six of the charts are preliminary in the sense that if additional and/or updated information is obtained, I would like to have the opportunity to amend or update the calculations, if necessary. Also, since a significant portion of the compensation in this case is dependent upon the price/value of Amazon and Microsoft stocks, the calculations can be updated to reflect their latest market values. Based upon today's market prices, the values used in this report are $1,755/share for Amazon, and $107/share for Microsoft.

The first chart in Attachment A contains a graph which illustrates Mr. Haydar's lost earnings, under an assumption that he would have continued with his employment at Amazon, without any past or future promotion(s). The taller/gray bars show the actual earnings of the two L7 comparable employees up to 2017, and then their anticipated compensation for 2018 - 2020 (assuming no change in Amazon's stock price from $1,755/share). The highest and longest blue line shows the trend in the L7 comparables' earnings from Amazon based on their compensation for years 2013 – 2020. The extended blue line with "+" marks shows my forecast of their anticipated compensation at Amazon for years 2021 – 2025. I based this forecast on their granted compensation from Amazon for this year (2018), with a valuation for Amazon stock at the time it was granted. Therefore, this should be reasonable measure of what the managers at Amazon believe is an appropriate level of earnings for these two employees. Over time, I do factor in a 4.0% per year adjustment for long-run wage inflation, and I use this adjustment for both salary and stock compensation at Amazon. Since the “Forecast Before” (blue line with “+” marks) is: i) less than past compensation at Amazon, ii) less than the trend of compensation at Amazon, and iii) includes only 4.0% growth in Amazon stock value, it is my opinion that this is a reasonable and conservative forecast of compensation for Mr. Haydar (if he had initially remained employed at Amazon).

Mr. Haydar’s earnings since being terminated at Amazon are also illustrated in the first chart in Attachment A. The red bars show his actual earnings from FarmLogs/AgriSight, HookLogic/Criteo, and LinkedIn/Microsoft up to today, and also his anticipated earnings at LinkedIn/Microsoft, assuming his employment continues to at least 2022. The figures from 2018 through 2022 are based upon his LinkedIn salary of $220,000, the RSU/stock he was granted at the time of hire (which has a four-year vesting period), along with the same 4.0% per year adjustment for changes in earnings over time. The shorter green line with “+” marks shows my forecast for Mr. Haydar’s earnings if he continues his salaried earnings (based on $220,000 in 2018 dollars), along with 4.0% increases over time. I have no basis to include any future earnings from potential promotion(s) and/or stock grants, as Mr. Haydar has no expectation of ever receiving such at LinkedIn. At the time of this report, he has only been employed at Linked in for about three months.

The second and third charts contain similar graphs, except that Mr. Haydar's lost earnings are based upon different comparables – Mr. "G" and Mr. "M", respectively. Each of these two Amazon employees has been promoted to L8. The differences in earnings between Mr. Haydar and these employees are greater than those seen in the first chart, because these two employees have received more RSUs/stock than the L7 employees.

The specific calculations for Abdullah Haydar's loss of earnings are contained in the fourth through sixth charts in Attachment A. In each chart, columns 1 and 2 provide Mr. Haydar's age and the corresponding year, respectively. The figures in column 3 are based upon the explanation given previously for the respective comparable employees – i.e., actual earnings up to 2017, anticipated earnings for 2018, 2019, and 2020 (based upon RSU/stock previously granted), and then anticipated earnings for years after 2020 (based upon earnings and stock valued at the time it was granted in 2018). This approach effectively removes Amazon stock appreciation (after the time it was granted) from being factored into future Amazon comparable earnings. The figures in column 4 are based upon Mr. Haydar's actual earnings up to today, and then his anticipated earnings based upon his latest employment circumstances and earnings from LinkedIn. Column 5 contains the year-by-year annual loss in earnings, and then the reduction to present value (per Michigan statute) is presented in columns 6 and 7. In this case, the reduction to present value has been performed with a 5.0% compound discount rate.

Based upon the assumptions and projections discussed above, the present value of Abdullah Haydar's lost earnings is projected to be $5,181,145 without factoring in any promotion(s), and then from $9,648,981 - $11,321,792 with consideration of a promotion to L8. A significant amount of the lost earnings has already been experienced by Mr. Haydar, as past losses range from $2.2 to $3.0 million dollars.

The remaining attachments are as follows: Attachment B contains 12 charts which are related to the issue of long-run inflation; Attachment C contains a copy of my CV, and Attachment D contains a list of the cases in which I have provided testimony over the last several years.

In Attachment B, the first 6 bar charts illustrate the effects of long-run inflation in different areas of the U.S. economy. Inflation does affect the prices of nearly all goods and services, although not in exactly the same magnitude, of course. The historical information which is set forth in these charts provides a foundation for making inferences about the future course of inflation. Over the past 30 years, average annual increases have been: 2.7% for overall consumer prices, 4.7% for medical care, and 3.6% for wages.

The 7th bar chart in Attachment B illustrates one of the coming changes in the age distribution of the U.S. population. Over the last 30+ years, post WWII “baby boomers” have been in the primary working age population group (i.e., between the ages of 20-65). However, over the next 15-20 years, most of these so-called “baby-boomers” will retire (as they enter the 65+ age group). The ratio of the working-age population relative to the retiree-age population will shift from about 5-to-1, to under 3-to-1. This shift will have significant effects in the labor market, including: i) an increase in the demand for many services (especially medical, caretaking, and household services), and ii) a decrease in the supply of workers, as relatively more workers will be leaving the labor force. For each of these reasons, there will be upward pressure on economy-wide wages. Therefore, individuals entering or remaining in the workforce can expect relatively good job prospects, and relatively high growth rates in wages and compensation for the foreseeable future.

The remaining 5 charts in Attachment D collectively show that a 4.0% long-run average increase is: i) conservative when compared to the U.S. Social Security Administration's long-run forecasts for labor market compensation, and ii) likely to be conservative regardless of one's level of education.

Finally, regarding my fees for this particular case, you should be aware that the charge for my time is $750/hour. At the present time, I have worked approximately 20 hours on this case. Please contact me if you have any questions.

Thomson Econometrics and Employment Research is a firm that provides economic and statistical research services to its clients. We also provide computer programming and data processing services. Research has been conducted relative to a broad range of economic and statistical issues, ranging from sophisticated analyses of employment policies and practices (generally regarding discrimination claims), to economic calculations and projections of past and future damages. Damage calculations have included: earnings fringe benefits, pension and structured settlement evaluations, lost sales and profits, business valuations, education valuations, medical expenses, losses due to physical injury and/or disability, and other economic losses. We also provide interested parties with a framework which is useful for evaluating "non-economic" damages, such as pain and suffering, losses of society and companionship, and/or hedonic damages.
